Caledon has lots of tourism opportunities

By Bill Rea

When it comes to planning a tourism strategy for the Town of Caledon, this area has a lot of strengths on which to focus.

That point came out last Thursday night at a public input session on the proposed strategy, held at Town Hall in Caledon East.

There was a lot of discussion regarding the facilities being prepared at Caledon Equestrian Park in Palgrave, in anticipation of next Year's Pan Am Games. But there were also reminders of other athletic events that attract people to the area. Councillor Doug Beffort made a point of citing the example of the annual Pond Hockey Tournament held at Alton Mill.

Sandra Dolson, economic development officer with the Town, told the roughly 20 people at the meeting the Town obtained the services of Sierra Planning and Management in February to come up with the strategy.

Jonathan Hack of Sierra said the effort has already resulted in a large draft report, which is still subject to change, pending public comments.

The idea at this stage, he said, is to submit the report to Town council at their Sept. 9 meeting, with recommendations.

Hack pointed out there are tourism strategies at the various levels of government, starting with the Province, and including Regions, as well as groups like the Hills of Headwaters Tourism Association. He added the aim of the Town's strategy is not to impede what's being done by the other levels of government, but rather to fill in gaps.

He explained the purposes of the strategy include identifying potential legacy opportunities associated with the coming Pan Am Games, facilitating local economic growth and tourism readiness, and maximizing the effectiveness of partnerships with other groups, like Hills of Headwaters.

Hack also said they are looking at long-term investment in tourism infrastructure while appreci-

Midnight Madness coming Aug. 15

The Madness is always a good time for families when it hits downtown Bolton, and this year's edition promises to be just the same.

Midnight Madness, the annual street festival hosted by the Bolton Business Improvement Area (BIA) is set to go next Friday (Aug. 15).

BIA President Jimmy Pountney said many of the attraction from the past will be returning, including the popular petting zoo, inflatables, and demonstrations by the local firefighters and Caledon OPP, as well as street vendors and a variety of food.

There will also be live entertainment, from such performers as Bob Parkins, Sarah Macrae, Bardos-Chicago Band, Liam Titcomb, Melanie Durrant and The Queen City Guns.

Pountney said Queen Street North will be closed at 4 p.m., and the festivities will start at 5:30.

If the weather proves uncooperative, he said the rain date will be Aug. 22.

"It's always family," he said. "It's all family fun."

Quote of the week

"They've really stepped it up here. It's world class."

Sporting events bring in many tourists, but there are other attractions ating the importance of balancing that with the needs of those who already live in town. He said that can be done by making use of natural resources, such as the local trails.

The development of this strategy is a two-stage process which is now in the second stage. There has already been a considerable consultation process, including the Headwaters Partners in Tourism Symposium in March, surveys, workshops and visioning sessions, etc.

Hack said they conducted an online survey of people who have previously visited Caledon, in an effort to gauge who's been coming, what's attracted them and how much they have been spending.

In terms of Caledon as a destination, Hack said the draft report has indicated a number of strengths, including the unique environmental setting, nearness of the Greater Toronto Area (GTA) markets, proximity to accommodations in neighbouring communities, heritage infrastructure and a wide range of tourism assets that highlight the rural setting. But there are some challenges too, including limited accommodation within town, a number of smaller tourism assets that mainly draw locally, dispersed tourism assets, and the fact Caledon is on an urban fringe, which blurs Caledon as being a rural destination and part of the GTA suburbs.

As for where these people are coming from, Hack said they heard from about 350 responders, which he said should provide some useful information.

"It is very much a regional market base," he said, adding it's spread around southern Ontario.

Sporting events is what attracted the bulk of the visitors, according to the survey, which was cited by about 110 respondents. The next frequently cited attraction was special festivals and events, with less than 40 responses. That was followed by visiting friends and relatives, other, spontaneous trips, business, tourism marketing and word of mouth.

About 30 of the respondents cited spontaneous trips, and Hack thought that was a key indicator. He also stressed to the audience that they shouldn't get the idea that most people come to Caledon for sports. He argued the survey gave a sense of what motivated the trips. They are also not suggesting the focus be on one area, such as equestrian.

Beffort cited the pond hockey tournament. "We have more of those events than you might think," he said.

In terms of level of satisfaction, Hack said the survey showed that almost 90 per cent of respondents were either highly or somewhat satisfied with their overall trip, and the total scores were more than 80 per cent when it came to equine activities and outdoor recreation. The satisfaction levels for camping and accommodations were lower; on the order of about 30 per cent.

Hack observed the close to 20 per cent who were not satisfied with the outdoor recreation could have had a number of reasons behind that.

"It could be anything," he said, adding someone could have reacted badly because they couldn't find a trail. "There's a whole range of things that could get in the way of someone's satisfaction."

There were also written comments submitted. They included criticisms, like the lack of accommodation and the fact that Caledon is not viewed as a vacation spot. Among the positive aspects cited were the spots for mountain biking and places to eat.

"Very picturesque," one person wrote. "Easy to get to. Lots of options."

Local resident Barb Shaughnessy observed that tourism in Caledon is largely day tourism. If the draw is mainly from the GTA, she wondered if there's a need for hotels.

Beffort countered the problem is people don't want accommodation where it's needed. Hack commented that adding accommodation adds market.

He also pointed out there are some tourism-related projects in town that are at various levels of development. The Hampton Inn and Suites in Bolton and the improvements at the Bolton Camp property are currently under construction, he pointed out.

Projects have been approved, but construction has not yet started at Pinnacle Heights Golf and Country Club, Osprey Valley Golf Course and the Cheltenham Badlands. Development applications have been made for Cambium Farms near Cataract and the Kaneff Properties near Inglewood.

The also listed the various hamlets in Caledon, citing potential tourism functions. For example, Alton was listed as a possible arts and culture hub, leveraging on the Alton Mill and Millcroft Inn.

Hack also listed several guiding principles in the development of the strategy. They include understanding and evolving tourism in Caledon. He stressed that one is important, because it has to be done in Caledon with interested partners in the community.

Collaboration is important too, as he stressed it's essential all sides get what they want.

He also pointed to the need to develop a tourism season throughout the year.

"This area has great potential," he stressed, pointing out there are six million people close by. But there needs to be support for community events to make them tourist events.

Some of the recommendations contained in the draft report could be addressed in the next year or two, including hiring a tourism officer, creating a state-of-the-art municipal tourism website and asset database, examining outdoor recreation possibilities in rehabilitated aggregate pits, exploring legacy opportunities (which is being done at the equestrian park).

Others are more achievable in the medium term (three or four years), such as land-use planning considerations, providing more visitor information in the form of print and online material, and working on more tourism and signature events.

Other actions would take longer, such as village improvements. Hack said that would apply to both private and public property to improve things for residents while providing amenities for tourists.

Former councillor Ian Sinclair pointed to the problems of too many people coming. He cited the number of people who go to Forks of the Credit to take in the fall colours. "We're getting overwhelmed," he said.

Hack agreed there needs to be a solution, but added everyone has to work on it.

Another man brought up the problem of littering. He cited the Badlands, commenting he goes there every summer and pulls 30 to 40 big bags of garbage.

Tamara Bangura, also of Sierra, said making the area more accessible, as well as making sure litter collection is a priority, should help.

One person at the meeting observed the more people who use the Caledon Trailway usually means less litter.

BOTTOMS CELEBRATE 50 YEARS

It was a happy mood around Caledon Seniors' Centre Sunday as family and friends gathered to help Isabelle and Ray Bottoms celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary. The two Bolton natives were married Aug. 1, 1964 at Caven Presbyterian Church by Rev. Marshall Jess. When asked to explain the secret for staying married 50 years, Mr. Bottoms boiled it down to two words, "Yes dear."

Community out to celebrate Tour de Terra Cotta

Terra Cotta was a hive of activity Monday for the 10th annual Tour de Terra Cotta. The event supports several causes, including Caledon Meals on Wheels, Terra Cotta Community Hall, Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Peel and Ted Webb Scholarships, in honour of the race's founder. Webb, 81, was taking part in the 52-kilometre Intermediate Road Race, accompanied by fellow Brampton Cycling Club members Jim Ritchie from Brampton and John Anderson from Terra Cotta.

Photos by Bill Rea

The top competitors among the women in the 104-kilometre Elite Road Race was Saskia Kowalchuk of Hamilton, followed by Sarah Mason of London and Jen Fawcette of Toronto.

These young folks, aged eight to 10, were taking off on the one-lap Youth Road Race.

The overall winner of the 104-kilometre Elite Road Race was Ryan Roth of Guelph, who completed the event a time of 2:34:16, and average speed of 40.5 km/h. Second place was William Elliott of Barrie in a time of 2:34:46, followed by Chris Firek of Mississauga in 2:36:37.

The event required a lot of volunteer help, from people like Andy Foley, who brandished a sword as part of his marshalling duties.

Mayfield Complex to be closed for renovations

The Mayfield Recreation Complex will be closed to the public from Aug. 18 until Sept. 2. This scheduled shutdown is due to the replacement of the roof and HVAC system.

Fall general programs will begin Sept. 22 and fall aquatic programs will begin Oct. 5.

Registration for these programs will begin Aug. 12 at 7 a.m. online at www.caledon.ca/recreation, or by calling 905-843-2216. In-person registration will not be an option at Mayfield during the period when the building is closed to the public, but is available at Caledon Community Complex in Caledon East and the Caledon Centre for Recreation and Wellness in Bolton.

OPP reminding off-road riders to wear safety equipment

Ontario Provincial Police in Central Region investigated two deaths related to off-road vehicle related activities in the last couple of weeks.

Police stress that fatalities such as these are as tragic as they are preventable. They are reminding riders of their responsibility to ensure their safe operation. This includes operating the vehicle in a safe manner to afford the opportunity of reacting appropriately to sudden changes in trail conditions, and to always wear the proper protective equipment to reduce the risks of injury.

All-terrain vehicles and other off-highway vehicles are motorized and require skill, good judgement and the proper use of helmets and other safety equipment to operate safely.

“Helmets are required by law and personal protective equipment can reduce the risk of serious injuries,” observed Chief Superintendent John Tod, commander of OPP Central Region. “Riders should remain vigilant of the ever changing terrain and operate their recreational vehicles within their personal capabilities.”

Personal protective equipment can include goggles that fit over the helmet, gloves, chest protectors, proper footwear and other safety related sportswear.

CALEDON OPP LAUNCH NEW BIKE UNIT

Members of the Caledon OPP Emergency Response Unit are now getting around on two wheels. The new Bike Unit was recently launched in Bolton. “We’re trying to build in roads with the bicycling community,” commented Sergeant Marcus Sanderson of the Community Response Unit. On hand for the launch of the program were Auxiliary Sergeant Mike McJannet, Auxiliary Constable Shane Atkinson, Sanderson, Auxiliary Constable Alfonso Ciarcelluti, Inspector Tim Melanson, Constable Andrew Mitchell, Constable Tamara Cureatz, Constable Dwayne Smith, Constable Will Prodger and Staff Sergeant Mike Garant.

Man charged with drinking-driving

A 32-year-old man from Barrie is facing charges after a two-vehicle collision on Highway 10 July 20.

Caledon OPP reports they were called out at about 8:30 p.m. to a location at the Grange Sideroad to deal with the incident. The investigation revealed that a grey Chevrolet was following a grey Toyota southbound on Highway 10. For an unknown reason, the Toyota stopped abruptly, causing the collision.

After determining that the injuries were minor, the officers approached the driver of the Chevrolet and immediately detected an odour of alcohol on his breath. He was arrested and charged with operating a motor vehicle with more than the legal limit of alcohol in his system.

His licence was suspended on the spot, and his vehicle was impounded for seven days.

Man charged with stunt driving

A 31-year-old man from St. Catharines was charged with racing a motor vehicle June 5.

Caledon OPP reports an officer was conducting speed enforcement shortly before noon in the area of the Highway 410 overpass and Kennedy Road. The officer spotted a black Suzuki GX7 heading north on Kennedy, clocking it at 152 km-h in a posted 80 zone.

The man’s car was impounded for seven days.

Tires and rims stolen on Hwy. 10

Caledon OPP are looking for whoever was responsible for the theft of four Harley Davidson rims and tires.

They were reported stolen May 24 from the back of a pick-up truck that had left unattended at a Highway 10 gas station. Video footage reveals that the suspect vehicle is an older model pick-up truck with a green sticker on the driver’s side rear of the truck.

Anyone with information on this theft is asked to contact police at 905-584-2241 or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS (8477).

Man arrested during traffic stop

A 39-year-old man was charged with breach of an undertaking June 13 after a traffic stop on Mayfield Road, east of Highway 410.

Caledon OPP reports officers spotted a silver Mercedes stopped in a westbound lane of traffic at about 2 p.m. Police stopped to check the situation and learned the driver and male passenger had taken the car out for a test drive. Further checking revealed the driver was bound by an Undertaking Order that stipulated he was to have no contact with the passenger.

Belfountain students win big in energy diet challenge

By Bill Rea
A lot of good work for the environment has been taking place at Belfountain Public School, and more recognition was added recently.
The school, and particularly the Grade 2 class, was presented with the grand prize for the best elementary school video in the 2014 Classroom Energy Diet Challenge (CEDC). The challenge is run by Shell Canada and Canadian Geographic. The company reported there were more than 1,200 classrooms from all over the country entered in the competition, demonstrating how they have raised their energy awareness and learned how to manage and reduce their consumption of energy.

The winning entry was produced by the Grade 2 students of Andrea Broersma. They were presented last week with a cheque for $2,500, which is to go toward technical enhancements for the school.
The student body was gathered to see the presentation, as Principal called it a “very exciting” occasion.
“This is an incredible school,” declared Trustee Stan Cameron, local representative on the Peel District School Board. “You are the champions.”
“I am so excited to be here this morning,” commented Darlene Klassen, advisor of social investment with Shell Canada Limited. “They did an amazing job.”
Klassen stressed the importance of young people knowing where energy comes from and how it’s created. She also pointed to the importance of conservation and energy literacy.
Ellen Curtis, educational program manager with the Royal Canadian Geographic Society, put the students through a quiz aimed at establishing various environmental and energy-related facts. For example, she said it takes more water to create a leather jacket than a pair of jeans or a 750-sheet pad of white paper.
Cars and trucks produce more greenhouse gases than construction equipment or indoor heating and air-conditioning.
Dufferin-Caledon MP David Tilson was impressed that more than 1,200 other classes were involved in the competition. “That tells you how good this video was,” he remarked.
Broersma expressed appreciation for all the support her class received in making the video, pointing out help came from students in other grades.
“You were our biggest fans,” she said. She also thanked the parents “for sending me these amazing kids.”
Broersma said she heard about the challenge from a friend who teaches at another school.
“I got really into it,” she recalled. “I got really excited.”
She added the students were quick to get enthused.
“They kind of took control of it,” she said. “They completely surprised me. They amazed me. They learned a ton of stuff.”

Belfountain Olympian Jake Holden joined Grade 2 students at Belfountain Public School as they received the grand prize for the best elementary school video in the 2014 Classroom Energy Diet Challenge.

FINALE FOR MUSIC TEACHER
The end of the school year saw the retirement of Glynn Lloyd, who’s been heading up the music program at Robert F. Hall Catholic Secondary School. “I am going to ski more, cycle more and sing more,” he said, reflecting on his plans for the future. “I’m going to join a choir.” Lloyd was teaching at Hall 16 years. “It’s a fabulous group of people,” he added. “We like to say we’re a community here, and we do.”

Now available! Fall and Winter 2014/15 Parks and Recreation Guide

Fall and Winter Program Registration begins Tuesday, August 12, 2014
at 7:00 a.m. online at caledon.ca/recreation or in person at the following locations:

Caledon Community Complex	905.584.9254
Caledon Centre for Recreation & Wellness	905.857.3313
Mayfield Recreation Complex (until August 17)	905.843.2216

Property Tax Information for Newly Constructed Homes

The following is important information for residents who recently moved into a newly constructed home:

Property Tax Due Dates are the first Thursday of March, May, July and September. For 2014, the next due date is September 4.

TAX ASSESSMENT INFORMATION FOR NEWLY BUILT HOMES

- If the Municipal Property Assessment Corporation (MPAC) has not yet assessed your house, the Town may have calculated and billed your property taxes based on the value of the land only.
- It may take up to three years after occupancy before your property assessment reflects both the land and the house.
- The Town issues supplementary tax bills when MPAC has reassessed a property because of additions or improvements that increase its market value or when MPAC has assessed a new home or building.
- For newly constructed homes that are currently assessed at land only, once the full assessment information becomes available, the Town will send a supplementary tax bill.
- The supplementary tax bill can date back three years and will be for taxes payable less any taxes already billed based on the land value.

PRE-AUTHORIZED PAYMENT PLAN (PAP)

- Your PAP application will be included with your final tax bill. The PAP application form is also available on the Town's website at: caledon.ca/tax
- Pre-authorized payment withdrawals are made on the first of the month, January through October OR on tax installment due dates, based on the PAP plan selected.

SEMI-DETACHED AND TOWNHOMES

When a large piece of land, such as the land that semi-detached and townhomes are built on, is divided into a series of smaller parcels of land, it is often necessary to "apportion" taxes from the original land block to the new individual parcels. MPAC assigns each of the new parcels an individual roll number and an assessment value for the land. When the Town receives this apportionment information from MPAC, an adjustment to the taxes is created and bills are issued.

Want an estimate of your taxes? Check out the property tax calculator at caledon.ca/tax to obtain an estimate of your annual taxes.

Richler on hand to open Humberview Writing Centre

By Bill Rea
Love of the craft is going to be important to the success of the new Humberview Writing Centre, and noted Canadian author and journalist Noah Richler tried to instill that at the recent grand opening ceremonies.
Based at Humberview Secondary School in Bolton, The Writing Centre is designed to support students with their writing during their lunch breaks.
Vice-Principal Lionel Klotz said the program is the first of its kind, and he predicted it will help students be more successful when it comes to their writing. The centre opened this semester, and already more than 200 students have made use of it.
“Once again, Humberview is on the cutting edge of education,” he said.
Jan McFadyen, representing the parent council at Humberview, praised the efforts to help the students reach their full potential.

“Thank you for your commitment to higher education,” she said.
Shannon McCauley of Student Success commented a need was seen at the school for more effective communication through writing. The kind of drop-in access to the centre is seen as a step in the right way,” she said.
The centre has also obtained the support of the Rotary Club of Bolton, to the tune of $2,000 for computers, speakers and supplies.
Rotarian Bruce Forbes said the club tries to support various organizations in the community, and the Interact Club at the school is a big part of that.
“We want to see it grow,” he said. “We want to see it flourish.”

Rotarian Murray Steward said he spent much of his working life in the corporate world, where he learned the importance of effective communication.
“It’s just so encouraging to hear that these situations, where people are not able to communicate, are being corrected,” he commented.
“Writing is tremendously important,” Richler observed, remarking that the stories people write and tell help make sense of the world.
“Writing clarifies thought,” he added. “It helps you at work too.”
The son of the late famed author Mordecai Richler, he quoted his father as saying writing is “more than just throwing letters up in the air and seeing how they come down.”
He has toured a lot in his career. Richler said he was once approached by a student at McGill University who was interested in being a writer and was seeking advice on what sort of woman he should get together with.
“A woman who doesn’t take you seriously,” was the reply.
He told the students if they’re going to be writers, they have to be ready for ups and downs along the way.
“Don’t be tough on yourself,” he warned.
Richler said he makes a point of writing at least a bit every day, “just to prove that’s what I do.”
He also said it’s important not to listen too much to people who have come before. He pointed out there are lots of ways to tell stories. “Just be open and open to the opportunities,” he said.
Canadians are a lucky and well-off people, and Richler observed there are a lot of artists and writers who think that makes us dull. He was more inclined to take the advice of a friend of his from the southern United States.
“Whatever you find, that’s the story,” he said. “Just write what you know, be inquiring and enjoy yourself.”
“You’ll discover your own rules,” he added. “The important thing, as I say, is do it.”

Humberview teacher Andrew Cresswell, Bolton Rotarians Bruce Forbes and Murray Stewart, Shannon McCauley from Student Success, student Sarah Sgambelluri, teacher Leanne Gignac, student Arielle Barber, teacher Irma Quintal and Student Katlyn Sarris were all taking part in the official opening of the Humberview Writing Centre.

Noted Canadian author and journalist Noah Richler spoke at the opening of the Humberview Writing Centre. “Writing clarifies thought,” he said. “It helps you at work too.”

Whitehead to seek his eighth term on Caledon Town council

Veteran Caledon councillor Richard Whitehead will be seeking his eighth term in this fall's municipal elections.

He is seeking to return as Peel Regional representative for Wards 3 and 4 (Caledon East and the former Township of Albion).

Whitehead is currently Audit Chair for both the Region and Town, and the chair of the Management Section of Peel council. In addition, he is a member of several special purpose committees related to fiscal management, economic development, traffic and transportation, growth management, community living, housing and the environment. As well, he is a member of the board and executive of the Toronto and Region Conservation Authority and is a founding member of the Humber Watershed Alliance.

"Elections are about setting new priorities and the selection of strong leadership in our community," he said.

"Caledon is under pressure to grow as dictated by provincial policy," he observed. "At the same time, we continue to strengthen our commitment to protect our own splendid environment and fragile ecosystem. Provincial policy, for all of its contradictions and anomalies, does not necessarily represent good community planning or reinforce effective, efficient and affordable local government."

Whitehead stressed the need for the Town to set its own objectives and manage the future in a way that's beneficial for the community.

"Like many, I'm concerned about the rate of growth and lament the loss of prime farmland," he stated. "I remain absolutely committed to protecting and enhancing our water, habitats and watersheds."

He pointed out that there will be a comprehensive provincial review of urban growth lands, existing communities, rural areas and protected greenspace next year.

"Rather than leaving our future in the hands of those with special and vested interests and unreasonable provincial policy demands, we must insist on managing our own future and determining what's best for our community," he said. "This is still our home and our precious legacy to protect."

He also pointed out Caledon will have a new mayor after the election, and the Region will have a new Chair, as he said many people have asked him to run again to bring his experience and knowledge back to the table.

"With my experience and your support, I look forward to the challenge ahead," he said.

Thompson unveils election platform

Growth and development, transportation and infrastructure, customer service and a continued commitment to Peel Regional government are key priorities in Allan Thompson's Caledon mayoral campaign platform.

Thompson, 53, the current Ward 2 Regional councillor, unveiled the first pillars of his election platform Monday night in Terra Cotta.

"There are several key issues at the forefront in our community right now and it is important that Caledon voters know where I stand," he said.

Topping the list is growth and development.

Based on the population growth projections issued by the province, the Caledon community is scheduled to grow, but Thompson said Caledon residents have spoken loud and clear. Growth and development occurring in Caledon is to be "managed growth," directed by their elected representatives.

"Council has a responsibility to ensure this happens," Thompson said.

"There is only one taxpayer and the Town needs to find the right balance between preservation of the countryside, and industrial and commercial growth to sustain our community budgets and future infrastructure needs."

As the head of council, Thompson said he will ensure that all stakeholders are aware of the direction conveyed by Caledon residents, and he committed to listen carefully to their ideas and solutions to bring managed growth to the town; growth that benefits the taxpayers of Caledon.

"My experience in politics has taught me that meeting the needs of our citizens is paramount and in order to do that we must listen to and understand our residents," he observed.

Thompson is holding a summer series of community sessions across the town to engage with voters, and he will be using feedback from these sessions to augment his platform's priorities.

Thompson's platform is available online at www.AllanForCaledon.ca. Thompson can also be followed on Twitter @AllanForCaledon or "Like" him on Facebook at www.facebook.com/AllanforCaledon for more campaign updates.

And when the infrastructure fails?

When the infrastructure is there and available and convenient, most of us are pretty quick to use it. And why not? After all, is that not what it's there for? But when the infrastructure fails, and that's occasionally going to happen, what then? Commuters in the Greater Toronto Area received a lesson in the very possibility last week. An accident closed the Toronto bound portion of the Burlington Skyway for several days. The accident occurred last Thursday afternoon. Since this incident sparked a criminal investigation, we're not going to deal much with the circumstances. What we think people should be thinking about are the results of such an incident, because the result was a really big mess. According to various media accounts, By Friday, it was reported most of the major traffic arteries in Hamilton were jammed, with business taking a beating because of delays in transporting goods and people. And that doesn't even take into account the human toll, of frustrated commuters stranded in gridlock and countless plans being disrupted. Although there were reports that things had improved a bit as the weekend progressed, the inconvenience people were put to was enormous. In fairness to the crews who were trying to get the bridge opened again, no matter how inconvenient things are, there are just some things that can't be rushed, especially when public safety is concerned. It was inconvenient, but under the circumstances, it needed to be done. Another thing that needs to happen, we believe, is people have to understand this could happen again. True, the circumstances would likely be different, but a major traffic incident could happen that could close the bridge for days. That means people will have to find alternate routes. And in a lot of cases, the ones they find will be found by others too. That means more snarling of traffic. There is a lot of infrastructure in our society, be it roads, hydro, running water, the internet, etc. When a major component is suddenly not available, that creates problems. And we have seen lots of examples over the last several months that some of these things we depend on might suddenly not be there. How long was your power out after the ice storm? We have to be ready.

Thanks for returning wallet

This is a shout out to St. Louis Bar and Grill Bolton with an enormous "thank you!"

On July 28, my family and I had the famous fabulous food at St. Louis Bar and Grill. The following morning there was a bag with something in it on my porch chair.

It was my wallet. We didn't even know that I had dropped my wallet in the parking lot; everything was in it and it was delivered to my house.

Thank you so much to Devon Sweetnam, an employee with St. Louis Bar and Grill in Bolton, who found my wallet and went the extra mile to even deliver it.

How kind, honest and wonderful is that? What a great way to keep us as customers forever!

We appreciate it so much.

Stop preferential treatment of aggregate industry

Residents of Ontario continue to raise concerns about the special treatment given to the aggregate industry, yet these concerns are not being addressed in government policy decisions. The recent review of the Aggregate Resources Act did not adequately recognize the concerns raised by the public and impacted local communities.

The special, preferential treatment of the aggregate industry needs to stop. Key pieces of environmental protection legislation include an "exception" clause for the aggregate industry. Big business interests should not take priority over the health, safety and quality of life of rural Ontarians, the environment and prime farmland.

Aggregate producers enjoy exemptions from requirements that apply to other types of development, including exemptions from environmental assessments, exemptions from Class III industrial zoning, promotion of "recycling" of industrial waste on rural extraction sites and reduced setbacks from adjacent residential properties.

The processing of construction demolition waste should not be disguised as "recycling." It is unacceptable that a clause mandating the siting of "recycling facilities" into pits and quarries was added into the 2014 Provincial Policy Statement after the public consultation period had concluded.

"Recycling" facilities, where construction and demolition waste occurs, should be located in lands zoned for industrial operations. They should not be located without appropriate setbacks from other sensitive land uses, including rural homes, schools and open aquifers.

This provincial election has brought out all parties seeking support from rural Ontario. I am calling on all candidates and all parties to stop this preferential treatment of the aggregate industry and to announce their support for a fair, impartial review of aggregate policy if they are elected.

It happened today

Shipping has dominated the Great Lake for many years, and still does.

But Niagara Falls always presented something of a problem when it came to sailing the likes of Lake Erie, Huron or Superior. But that was solved by René-Robert Cavelier, Sieur de La Salle when he had Le Griffon constructed on the Niagara River.

Le Griffon made its maiden voyage this day, Aug. 7, 1679.

I'm on camera all the time

I am the first to admit I don't understand all there is to know about social media. I don't Tweet or Text or any of those others things that are so trendy these days. I know how to get on the internet and send and receive emails. Considering I have been working in the communications field for more than 30 years, I probably should be more up on the latest trends. In my own defence, I'm two busy communicating in this forum to learn other ways to communicate. But if I don't understand the workings of all this technology, I know I am in very good company. And even those who use this stuff regularly might not appreciate the other issues involved with what they're doing, including the consequences. We're always hearing stories about people who express foolish thoughts over some of these social network vehicles. It's not too surprising. When it comes to simple conversation, we all occasionally come out with remarks we wish we could have back. When was the last time you got through a whole day without such an episode. And it's the same with other forms of communication. I've sent out lots of emails I've regretted, like probably everyone else. Another consequence is the occasionally dumb thoughts we express can get out in the public domain, and we don't realize it until it's too late. A good recent example involved Los Angeles Clippers owner Donald Sterling. From what I understand, he made some foolish and offensive remarks that were being recorded without his knowledge, and they ended up being made public. I also understand he was speaking in the privacy of his own home, but the comments went out, and he had to answer for them; big time. At the time, I heard a number of commentators stress the fact there might not be any such thing a privacy any more. So if we transgress, the whole world might find out about it. Which brings us to the Toronto bus driver who was caught on video recently running a red light. I've seen the video. It was taken from a car that was following the bus in another lane. I have also read the letter the driver wrote to her superiors, calling the incident "an unacceptable lack of judgment." Was it? Certainly a driver should not be running red lights, but it happens, and there are sometimes other factors and circumstances that can mitigate the infraction. I think most of us who drive are guilty of the occasional infraction. I've committed a few in my time. It's probably more common among those of us who drive a lot in our jobs. I don't know whether this driver should have lost her job. We all make mistakes, but a bus driver is responsible for the lives of a number of other people. Mistakes like that can really hurt. On the other hand, there are a lot of people who are showing a sympathetic side toward this driver, including the guy who submitted the video. What did he expect would happen? The reality that we have to live with is just about anything we might say or do can easily end up being public information. Maybe we should think about that for a minute or two. At what point are we going to have to start answering for what we think? Ever read Nineteen Eighty-Four? It is true that it's hard to go anywhere these days without being on some camera. On an impulse while writing this, I got up and went looking for the nearest camera. It didn't take long. There's a walkway next to the building that houses the Citizen office, with a prominently-placed sign stating the area is under 24-hour surveillance. I have no problem with that. There's a parking area at the rear of the building that some of us in this office use (I generally only use it if I'm working late at night). Although it's well-lit, it can be ominous walking through there after dark, especially, I would think, for women. It adds a bit more security. How many stores now monitor customers. Sometimes when I'm standing in line in a store, I will kill time by trying to spot the cameras. It's seldom hard to do. The idea of cameras in stores is really nothing new. They have been around at least 40 years. During his time in the retail sector, my father had cameras installed in his store in an effort to combat shoplifting. He made no secret of it. In fact, he had flyers announcing the presence of cameras tucked into bags with customers' purchases. My very first job was filling bags at the store, and my dad nagged me to make sure the flyers went in.

Bill Rea

These cameras have been around for years, yet I have heard no outcry — ever. Walk into a school these days. Most of them have cameras in the halls and I can't imagine anyone raising a fuss over that, considering it involves the safety of children. There have been just too many horror stories over the years. And even when we don't have guys shooting videos of buses running red lights, many intersections are equipped with such cameras. I haven't been caught yet, largely because I try to avoid activities that will result in traffic tickets. My insurance rates are high enough, thank you. If there's opposition to these cameras, it's pretty silent. The only time I've ever heard complaints was about 20 years ago, when the Bob Rae government, in one of its very few moves I agreed with, brought in photo radar. It was a great program because it helped reduce speeding and provided money for the Province. And the best part was, all the contributions were voluntary. I drove the 400 highways every day photo radar was in effect and never contributed a dime, simply because I chose not to speed excessively. The problem, as far as I'm concerned, was there were a lot of drivers out there who like to speed, and photo radar made it hard for them to get away with it. The funny part involved arguments some of these jokers put up. Some called it invasion of privacy. Yeah, right! You walk into just about any store or through just about any public area, including the walkway next to the Citizen office, and your every move is going to be recorded, along with every move of who ever you happen to be with. If it's someone you shouldn't be with, as far as your spouse is concerned, then that's your worry. It would be nice if someone could explain the difference to me. I'm sure there are lots of you out there willing to try, but trust me — none of you will succeed.

Celebrating Canada's relationship with India after 67 years

Aug. 15 marks India's 67th year of independence.

This important milestone in India's rich history is the perfect opportunity to reflect on the special relationship between our nations and celebrate the important contributions of Canadians of Indian heritage.

Under the leadership of Prime Minister Stephen Harper, our government is working hard to strengthen an already strong relationship between Canada and India.

Rooted in our shared values of democracy, pluralism, human rights, and the rule of law — not to mention our long-standing people-to-people ties — Canada's relationship with India is expanding through enhanced trade and cooperation.

When Harper made his trip to India in 2012, he committed to enhancing bilateral trade between our countries. In fact, our government is currently working toward the completion of the Canada-India Free Trade Agreement as a part of our ambitious free trade agenda.

The Prime Minister also announced the conclusion of negotiations for the Canada-India Nuclear Cooperation Agreement agreement will help create jobs here at home, while giving us closer ties with India.

Our government has also helped improve our countries' people-to-people ties with the signing of the Canada-India Social Security Agreement. This deal will help better facilitate the flow of people and ideas between our nations by making it easier for business professionals to work in each other's countries. Going forward, we're working to enhance ties between our universities so that students can more easily benefit from being able to study abroad.

On behalf of Prime Minister Stephen Harper and the rest of our government, Happy Independence Day to the people of India and to all those in our community who are celebrating this milestone.

Peel youth volunteered greatly in ChangeTheWorld campaign

The ChangeTheWorld — Ontario Youth Volunteer Challenge recently wrapped up.

This was a six-week provincial campaign which encouraged youth aged 14 to 18 to volunteer through a wide variety of exciting local initiatives.

Last year during ChangeTheWorld, Volunteer MBC engaged more than 7,264 youth, exceeding the target by almost 1,000. Youth put in an astounding 25,521 volunteer hours in 167 events across Peel. This year, youth in Peel volunteered beyond expectations, with 7,520 young people taking part, putting in more than 30,690 hours in 328 events. This represents a 96 per cent increase in youth-related volunteer events held during the campaign and a 20 per cent increase of youth volunteer hours.

"Peel youth have, once again, stepped up and demonstrated their on-going commitment to making a difference in our community while gaining valuable skillsets in the process," said Volunteer MBC Executive Director Carine Strong. "It is through their efforts that many causes are brought to the forefront, such as youth mental health, multiculturalism, literacy, bullying, environmental issues and more. We commend all of the youth in Peel for taking action to change their world."

ChangeTheWorld is funded by the Provincial government, in partnership with the Ontario Volunteer Centre Network (OVCN). The goal is to inspire youth to volunteer, develop new skills and broaden their awareness of community service organizations.

This year, Volunteer MBC coordinated seven of the events and three were led by the centre's Step Up Youth Volunteer Ambassadors Committee, a program managed completely by a dynamic group of high school students. Events included a Multicultural Youth Festival and MAD-Scatter, an interactive day of rediscovering mental health and specifically addressed the issues of stress experienced by high school students. Other youth-related volunteer events were coordinated by local community service organizations and partners including the Caledon Public Library Monster Book Sale.

Plans for next year's campaign are already in progress. It will be held from April 12 to May 24 and in September, at the start of the school year, the volunteer centre will be reaching out to all Peel area high schools (62 in total) to promote the campaign and how youth can get involved and be part of this provincial initiative. ChangeTheWorld is an excellent opportunity for youth to get their community service hours, which are required to graduate from high school.

Volunteer MBC is looking forward to the continuing support of the Peel District

School Board and the Dufferin-Peel Catholic District School Board to help promote the campaign and youth volunteerism in Peel.

Volunteer MBC is a volunteer centre serving Caledon, as well as the Cities of Brampton and Mississauga. The centre offers a referral and matching service for volunteer placement within the community for all ages (youth, adults, seniors, and families). They also provide education and support for volunteers and community service agencies and organizations, and serve the corporate community with various programming services that engage individual and team volunteering. Additionally, the centre strives to be a strong voice to support and promote volunteerism.

For more information about Volunteer MBC, to access their on-line volunteer opportunities database, and to find more details on the centre's three locations, visit www.volunteermbc.org

Dates set for advance polls in election

The advance voting dates in the 2014 municipal election in Caledon have been set for Oct. 11, 18, 23 and 24.

Caledon council recently approved the dates on the recommendation of Town staff.

These dates introduce more flexible opportunities for eligible voters to choose their representatives. Staff reported the Saturday before Thanksgiving weekend (Oct. 11) was specifically chosen with university and college students in mind, giving them the chance to vote when they return home for the long weekend.

The first two Saturdays (Oct. 11 and 18) will provide electors the chance to cast their vote between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. The Thursday and Friday of the week preceding Voting Day (Oct. 23 and 24) allow noon to 8 p.m. for advance voting. The locations for these voting days will be posted to the Town of Caledon's website when they are finalized by Town staff.

Advance voting opportunities and reduced hours are now available for retired homes and institutions, as well. These hours are strictly for residents of these locations who would like to vote without having to leave their facilities. For those in Oliver House, the hours are 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.; The Davis Centre, 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m.; and King Nursing Home, 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Nothing to do about free speech

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Claire Hoy

Here's a question: since when did free speech depend upon taxpayer's subsidies?

It never has, of course. But to judge by the absolutely hysterical media coverage of the current campaign by the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) to audit several well-known Canadian charities, you'd think the end of the world as we know it is high.

And the bad guy — as usual — is Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

Just look at the letters page in the Saturday Star — a newspaper which has yet to see a Tory it can't accuse of foul deeds — and of the 15 angry letters on the subject just one — that's ONE — thinks it's actually not a bad idea to ask charities to spend their tax-subsidized dollars according to the rules.

The rest essentially see Harper as the Machiavellian master of a plot to destroy all that we Canadians hold dear and dear, particularly the concept of free speech.

In fact, auditing a charity — even if it loses its charitable status as a result — does not stop it from saying what it wants to say. The free speech thing is a complete canard first floated by many of the decidedly left-wing groups who loathe Harper and the Tories as much as the Star does.

Much of the recent focus was sparked by the CRA audit of PEN Canada, clearly an outrage since it directly involves a gang of left-leaning journalists and writers who, apparently, should be able to spend tax dollars with absolute impunity.

The overwhelming theme of the coverage is that Harper — the nasty, nasty person that he is — has ordered the CRA to crack down on left-wing groups which have been critical of him.

People ask why right-wing groups are not subjected to audits as well? Good question. The answer is, they are. The decidedly right-of-centre Fraser Institute, for example, has been audited three times.

What's more, beyond making the easy accusations, there isn't a shred of evidence that has been produced to indicate that the CRA — a rather stridently independent bureaucracy — is under direct orders to go after left-wing groups. That's the charge. But, as the old commercial used to say, "Where's the beef?"

There's also the small matter — which, as far as I know, has been ignored by all media except for the National Post — of a column written by former PEN Canada treasurer Hank Bulmash who argues that "charitable status is a privilege and not a right" and it is perfectly reasonable for the government to audit their activities to make sure they focus on charity and don't go beyond the sensible 10 per cent spending limit on direct political activities.

He points out that despite all the hype over the government's decision to add $8 million to the CRA's auditing budget, only one charity — Physicians for Global Survival (Canada) — has lost its charitable status registration. Even here, it was under review by the CRA for six years before the decision was made.

As for the audit of PEN which has sparked so many of the usual suspects to scream (once again) that the sky is truly falling, the former PEN treasurer says PEN "has little to worry about."

But we should be wary. "The crucial message of the current government's campaign has nothing to do with this government alone. It is a reminder that our charitable status is a privilege and not a right. It is a privilege granted by CRA, an arm of the government, and as such we and other charitable organizations will always exist subject to the scrutiny of those in power in Ottawa. "This is not unjust, at least not in principle. It's the way the world works."

It is, in fact, the way the world should work as well.

Do these people who are whining about the current CRA audits really believe that the thousands and thousands of charities in this country enjoying hundreds of millions of your tax dollars for their works somehow should be allowed to spend your money any way they wish without the slightest accountability to the government which sends them the cheques?

Get past the hysteria, past the usual left-wing moaning and the built-in belief in their own privilege, and the fact of the matter is the government wouldn't be doing its job if it didn't continually audit these groups.

If they don't like it, they can always deregister themselves and collect their own money without feeding off the government teat.

Failing that, if they are going to accept the money they have to accept the conditions that go with it.

And again, none of it has a thing to do with free speech. Nada.

Crisis of wait lists for developmentally disabled people in Ontario

By Dely Farrace

Almost three years ago, the government of Ontario established Developmental Services Ontario (DSO) in its attempt to streamline and improve services for developmentally-disabled adults and their providers, and to make the government more accountable to taxpayers.

Unfortunately, the program seems to have backfired, because current services have been abruptly terminated for the people served who have reached their 18th birthday. In its place, a complicated and onerous process emerged to re-qualify these people for services. Essentially, the new process requires previously qualified disabled persons to prove that they are still disabled, resulting in long wait lists for indispensable service. If someone is born with autism, for example, this disorder remains with them their entire lives and there is a continual daily need for these people to be engaged in meaningful activities in order to offset regression. Re-qualification is not required and any interruption to their service is detrimental to their health and well-being.

The final, non-partisan report of the Select Committee on Developmental Services Ontario has just been released. Is there a sigh of relief from parents awaiting services for their adult children with developmental disabilities like autism? Possibly. Earlier in July, there was pressure from Committee Vice-Chair Christine Elliott to release the document, and she insisted that the Wynne government begin to implement the recommendations, with an emphasis on properly allocating funds.

So what do the findings of the report mean to those families caring for a developmentally-disabled individual and for that individual himself? The most prominent, paramount piece of the report was the recommendation for immediate dissolution of wait lists; the call of families for more than a decade now. Wait lists are the most damaging component of services, rendering many families ineffective, broken and lifeless.

With the advent of the DSO came the unprecedented influx of adult children drop-offs at the door of their local DSO office. These families, with aging and spent parents of children with developmental disabilities, could no longer cope with the incessant needs of their dependent child. In many cases, families experience breakdown much earlier, from marital breakdown to parental illness and death. Parents of disabled children experience constant stress, both physically and emotionally from the unrelenting needs of their children with severe disabilities.

Clearly, something is systemically wrong, and nothing short of the elimination of the wait lists can address this problem.

Let's take a look at grandparents of typical families. For the grandparents out there, empty nesters, how does it feel when you visit with your children and, more notably, grandchildren? Do you feel exhausted when they leave or when you return home from the visit? Are you relieved that you have had a chance to rest? Now, for all its benefits of spending time with the grandchildren, take this scenario and make it your everyday life, constant and unrelenting. Now make these children bigger, so that they may be stronger than you, yet still require the same types of assistance, such as toileting. Let's say, also, that they cannot speak or understand complex language. How has your world changed now? How long do you think you can live this way? And for parents, whose typical children become more independent, like going out with their friends to the park or to the store, starting at approximately eight to 10 years of age. What a relief it is to be able to complete chores with some peace and quiet and no unremitting demands.

The provincial government has 12 months to eliminate wait lists as per the recommendations of the report of the Select Committee on Developmental Services. With 12,000 developmentally disabled Ontarians waiting for placement in group homes, Community and Social Services Minister Helena Jaczek has committed to building a plan to implement the 46 recommendations and report back on progress in six months.

This may be an indication that the currently elected government is serious about the issues that the developmentally disabled and their families face. They have conceded to the urgency of the situation and have indicated their commitment to providing adequate resources so as to meet the needs of these marginalized persons. However, Jaczek stated that a more realistic timeframe is two years to eliminate the wait lists because agencies need to build up their capacity.

In the meantime, I would expect that those families in crisis will be tended to most immediately. Building capacity is a vital step to eliminating the wait lists. And eliminating wait lists will provide the critical first step in the realization of meaningful lives for some of the most marginalized people in our society.

Kelly Soleau wins Grand Prix event in Palgrave

By Bill Rea

The nice thing about going last in a jump-off is you know what the time to beat is.

That's just what Kelly Soleau of Marlborough, Connecticut, did Saturday in the RAM Equestrian Challenge Grand Prix as part of the 2014 Equestrian Festival at Caledon Equestrian Park in Palgrave.

Soleau, riding Centre Ice, was among the two of 17 entries who turned in clear rounds in the opening session. The other was achieved by Jonathan Millar of Perth, aboard Star Power. The course was designed by Mariana Azevedo, and it proved tricky, as several of the competitors drew time faults.

Millar was first into the ring in the jump-off, and he and his mount turned in a flawless performance in 44.91 seconds. Knowing what she had to beat, Soleau and Centre Ice shaved a little more than two-and-a-half seconds of the time to beat, completing the clear round in 41.91 seconds.

"I just tried to be as fast as I could," she said later. "I'm glad I did."

Centre Ice is a 14-year-old Dutch Warmblood, who Soleau bought from the Millars. But she didn't think Saturday's success got any noses out of joint.

"I think they're pretty excited," she said. "He's a pretty special horse to all of us."

Soleau was also impressed with the improvements that have been made at the Equestrian Park, in anticipation of next year's Pan Am Games.

"It's wonderful," she said. "The improvements are absolutely unbelievable."

"They've really stepped it up here," she added. "It's world class."

Third place Saturday went to Kean White from Rockwood, who guided For Freedom Z through as clear round, but it took them about a second too long to do it.

Neil Badcock of King City was on his way to a clear round on Corrido in good time, but they came in for a bit of grief on the second last jump and he had to settle for fourth place with four faults.

Soleau was also entered on Itty Bitty, and they finished fifth with four faults.

Palgrave area resident Chris Sorensen was the only Caledon rider in the field, and he had two mounts. It wasn't a great day, as he picked up eight faults on Recadis-B for and eighth place finish, and 12 on Bonaire.

Super Elite Football Camp has grown in seven years

By Jeff Doner

In 2007, Nick Burns started Super Elite Football with a vision of promoting and growing the game he loves throughout Ontario.

Over the last seven years, Super Elite has worked closely with numerous youth football organizations across Ontario, including the Ontario Varsity and Minor Football Leagues, the Nations Capital Amateur Football Association and the Ontario Football Conference.

"It started as one camp with 53 kids in our first year and now this year we have 20 camps with just over 1,200 kids," Burns said. "It's been really neat to see the process grow the way it has. We charge as little as possible to help these kids have an experience of a lifetime at every single camp."

Burns, who played football at McMaster University and in the CFL with the Hamilton Tiger Cats, first started running camps from his hometown in Barrie, but is now predominantly based throughout York Region.

Most recently, Super Elite has held camps at Villanova College and Country Day School in the King City area, and at the Aurora Sports Dome.

"York Region is a huge hotbed for football," he said. "Our mission statement is to improve football from a grassroots level, not only in our area, but in our country. There are some great organizations in the region, like the York Simcoe Bucs, the Markham Raiders; those organizations are big supporters of youth football."

Their first annual Summer Youth Leadership camp is running from July 21 to 25 at the Aurora Sports Dome and is sure to be a big hit.

The summer camp runs all day, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and includes lunches, two full fundamentals practices throughout the day, pool activities, leadership and team building activities, academic mentorship from University coaches, and daily mentorship from past and present CFL players, including Toronto Argonauts James Yurichuk and Andre Durie.

"We also have guys that have gone through the system and university and are coming back to help out," Burns said.

"It's a really neat dynamic with a great group of kids and coaches.

"We're a fundamentals-based camp, so it's all about getting these kids better, growing the sport of football and more importantly giving them an experience that they're never going to forget."

The Summer Youth Leadership Camp costs $349 for the entire week and there is a possibility for financial assistance if needed.

Aside from their summer camps, Super Elite also offers eight week programs in the winter and overnight provincial camps.

Burns said Super Elite works with youth all the way up to 19 years old and hopes the game will continue to catch on.

"We've put a lot of emphasis on the younger players, because I think they're the future of our sport, so we're trying to mold them into players," he said. "Football is not for everyone, but what we try to do is give them a camp that allows them to become excited about the game."

Check out Countryside Stewardship Connection

There is now an opportunity for people to connect with the Credit River watershed's rural community, share success stories, discuss issues and learn about countryside living and the environment.

There is also expert advice available on caring for land and water.

Credit Valley Conservation (CVC) and the Greenbelt Foundation have introduced a new online discussion forum called the Countryside Stewardship Connection. The Connection allows rural landowners, community groups, environmental agencies and local businesses to network with each other and CVC in an exciting, new way.

The online social networking site is easy to use and accessible via cell phone, tablet, or laptop, all in the comfort of home.

"The Connection is a great place to chat with neighbors and other landowners in the countryside," said Wellington equine farmer Bridget Ryan. "We've been missing a platform to ask questions and learn from each other. This online tool will help fill that gap."

It's easy to become a member at www.csconnection.ca

As an added bonus, the first 100 new members to join the Connection will be entered into a draw for a chance to win one of two $50 market buck vouchers a local farmers market.

"With sites like LinkedIn and Facebook, social media is a widely used tool to connect people. This makes sense to connect with landowners and community groups in a similar way," said Friends of the Greenbelt Foundation CEO Burkhard Mausbart. "We are excited to support this cutting-edge online tool. Encouraging strong engagement and collaboration among landowners about environmental stewardship of their land is vital for the future of Ontario's Greenbelt. This site will be important as we look to grow the Greenbelt along the Credit River Valley."

The Connection is an innovative social networking site and a first of its kind for conservation authorities. Later this year, CVC will be working with neighboring conservation authorities to share the technology.

Caledon's Andrew Yorke finished fourth in the triathlon in the Commonwealth Games in Glasgow.

Andrew Yorke places fourth in Commonwealth Games

It's been a long journey but Caledon's Andrew Yorke had the race of his life in his most important triathlon.

The 2014 Commonwealth Games had one of the most competitive races in history. The Caledon East resident placed fourth, behind the Olympic gold and bronze medalist.

"Things just really came together for me in Glasgow and I am so happy to have given Canada my best performance on the day it really mattered," Yorke said.

The race included a 1,500-metre swim, 40-kilometre bike ride and 10-kilometre run. Yorke was just 10 seconds back of the bronze medalist from South Africa.

He got started in the local C3 Kinetic Kids of Steel Triathlon more than a decade ago. Since then, he has raced at the World Junior Championships, the World Under 23 Championships and the Senior World Championships. This year, he has raced in Auckland, New Zealand; Yokohoma, Japan; Hamburg, Germany; and Clermont, Florida. Yorke will be racing later this summer in Stockholm, Sweden; Edmonton, Alberta; and Korea.

"Few people have worked harder or been more committed to world-class excellence," said Olympic coach Barrie Shepley.

Yorke wanted to thank Caledon Hills Bike Shop, Cervelo Bikes, Nineteen Wet-suits, Kinetic Water Systems, Benson Steel, Royal Containers and C3 for their great help on his journey.

The Town of Caledon will be officially recognizing Andrew Yorke in September (at a date to be confirmed). The Humberview Secondary School graduate and McMaster University running star, is hoping to race in next year's 2015 Pan American Games and ultimately the 2016 Rio Olympics.

Maple Leaf Junior Golf Tour comes to Caledon over holiday weekend

By Jake Courtepatte

Caledon Country Club near Inglewood was the site for the most recent stop on the Maple Leaf Junior Golf Tour over Civic Holiday weekend.

Despite some inclement weather Saturday, 58 golfers aged 19 and younger competed for titles in eight divisions, coming from across Canada for the tournament.

A non-profit organization, MJT is run exclusively by PGA professionals. As Canada's most-played major junior golf tour, this was the fifth stop at Caledon CC over its 15-year history.

Mike Skimson, a PGA Canada professional and MJT tournament director in Ontario, said the Tour has always found the course in good shape.

"It's a great golf course," said Skimson. "The kids enjoy it, it always goes well in Caledon. We have a good relationship with the people up there, so we keep coming back."

Located along the Credit River, it is an 18-hole course made challenging by the rolling Caledon hills. Skimson said the course provides "a challenging test" for young golfers.

Light rain Saturday didn't stop Brad Hildebrandt of Ancaster, Ontario from taking home the low overall score, shooting 72 and 71 for one-under for the tournament. Vince Greco of Bolton represented local talent, shooting a 74 the second day to finish second in the bantam boys category.

Greco's come-from-behind success also earned him the Golf Town Comeback Award in his division.

New to MJT this year is the Mini Tour Series, available for golfers aged 12 and under. Caledon CC hosts one of only five Mini Tour events in Ontario.

"It's a brand new program, so we're still in the testing phase," said Skimson. "We're trying to see what kind of following we can get, and what kind of numbers we can produce."

Taking place as a one-day event Saturday, the course was modified to set up yardages based on the younger golfers' ages and skill levels.

The low round was an impressive five-over 77, shot by 12-year old Michael Ikejiani of Minesing, Ontario. Nine-year old Rozlyn Rooke led the pack in the girls division, putting together a score of 86.

The Tour hosts its own National Championship in Phoenix, Arizona, in November. In order to qualify, a golfer must compete in three season events.

The next opportunity for local golfers comes to Osprey Valley Golf Course in Alton

Aug. 16 and 17.

For more information on the Tour or to register for a tournament, visit www.maplejt.com.

Girls division winner Rayna Oosterhuis, Junior Boys division winner Brad Hildebrandt, Juvenile Boys division winner Justin Brazeau, and Bantam Boys division winner Ryan Trocchi.

DEATHS

McDONALD, DENNIS

Living a long, happy, respectful and inspiring life, Edward Vern (Ted) McDonald in his 93rd year passed peacefully on Father's Day, June 15th, 2014 in Inglewood, Ontario.

Son of the late William Edward McDonald and Edith (Davy), Ted was born January 14th, 1922 at their family homestead on the shores of Lake of the Rivers in Davyroyd, Saskatchewan near Assiniboia. He was delivered by both his father and mother and did not see a Doctor until he was 3 months old.

A Veteran of the World War II, Ted served in the Canadian Air Force, spending most of his time around Kesh, Ireland. He did not speak of the war often, as he lost many friends during that time of his life. Returning aboard the Queen Mary, Ted then headed to Toronto in search of life beyond the war and held a position at Kelvinator Refrigeration.

White in Toronto, Ted met his wife Alice, and began a career in the grocery industry, opening two stores in the neighbourhoods of The Beaches at Queen St. E. and upper Gerrard & Coxwell, with his brother Doug and brother-in-law Walter Greenside. During this time, being no stranger to hard work and knowing what it took to get ahead in life, Ted also prospected for uranium and precious metals in Northern Ontario.

Ted, Alice and family moved to Shelburne in 1956 and opened up the IGA store then located on Owen Sound St. and second IGA was opened in Collingwood. He ran both for many years and then had a plaza built where the Foodland and Giant Tiger are located today. Ted also served a term on the Shelburne council.

DEATHS

RONAN, Gail

Peacefully at Markham Stouffville Hospital on Saturday August 2, 2014. Gail Freeman (originally from County of Middlesex England), in her 69th year, beloved wife of the late Michael Ronan. Loving Mum of D'Arcy and Denise, the late Kerry, Michael and Linda, Nigel and Dawn, and Alexis. Remembered with love by her grandchildren: Jordan, Madisen, McGuire, Meadow, Seth, Keiren, and Ella. Sadly missed by her brother Michael, Nigel and the late Pat Freeman. Beloved daughter of the late Ken and Jean Freeman. Forever in the hearts of Michael's family: Gerald and Brenda, Julia, Pat and Joan, sister-in-law Mary, and the late Jimmy

DEATHS

RYAN, Carlota

Peacefully at Brampton Civic Hospital, with her family at her side, on Saturday, August 2, 2014, Carlota Ycaza, beloved wife of Robert Ryan, Bolton. Dear daughter of Lucia and the late Harry Ycaza. Dear sister of Harry and Pilar.

The family will receive their friends at the Egan Funeral Home, 203 Queen Street S. (Hwy. 50), Bolton (905-857-2213) Thursday evening 6 – 9 o'clock. Funeral Mass will be held in Holy Family Roman Catholic Church, 60 Allan Drive, Bolton on Friday morning August 8 at 10 o'clock (leaving funeral home at 9:45 a.m.). Interment Queen of Heaven Cemetery, 7300 Hwy. 27, Woodbridge. Parish prayers will be held Thursday evening at 6:15 o'clock. Condolences for the family may be offered at www.EganFuneralHome.com

DEATHS

SPEERS, Lynda

At Etobicoke General Hospital on Monday, August 4, 2014, Lynda Bracken, in her 69th year. Loving mother of Brenda Speers and her husband Mike Smith, Dwayne and his wife Denise Speers, Lisa and her husband Andy Irvine. Sadly missed by former husband Wayne Speers. Devoted grandmother of Melissa; Drew and Delaney; Brandon and Jessica. Dear sister of Twyla Harris, Allan Bracken and predeceased by Lorna, Jack and Ted. Sadly missed by many nieces and nephews.

The family will receive their friends at the Egan Funeral Home, 203 Queen Street S., Bolton (905-857-2213) Thursday afternoon 2 – 4 and evening 7 – 9 o'clock. Funeral service will be held in the chapel on Friday morning, August 8 at 11 o'clock. Followed by cremation. If desired, memorial donations may be made to the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario. Condolences for the family may be offered at www.EganFuneralHome.com

DEATHS

Living a healthy and happy life, Ted was fortunate enough to be retired longer than he had worked. Ted and Alice enjoyed many trips across the world from North America, Australia, Europe and China. Ted has a passion for fishing, hunting, golfing, curling and loved watching baseball. Ted was one of the most thoughtful, considerate, kind and intelligent men to ever live and will be missed by his family and friends always.

DEATHS

Ted leaves behind his wife Alice of 68 years, Larry (Nancy), Dennis (Wendy), Lorraine (Tom), 9 grandchildren and 5 great grandchildren.

DEATHS

A life like Ted's is to be admired and remembered, not mourned.

DEATHS

A celebration of his life will be announced at a later date.
